PROFILE

James Foley has been practicing at the Sydney Bar since June 2017. James practices in civil litigation, including disputes relating to banking and financial services, bankruptcy and insolvency, partnerships, minority shareholder rights, insurance, real property, employment and general commercial contract claims. James has also acted in a number of matters involving deceased estates, including claims under Chapter 3 of the Succession Act 2006 (NSW) (family provision claims).

James appears in the Supreme, District and Local Courts of New South Wales, the Federal Court of Australia and the Federal Circuit Court of Australia.

James' clients have included the ANZ Bank, the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, a number of large insurers and a number of small to medium size businesses.

PREVIOUS PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

James was admitted as a solicitor in 2010. Following his admission, James practiced as a solicitor at a small Sydney based firm for two years (in a general commercial litigation practice), before joining a national firm, where he practiced in litigation and insolvency for five years and was appointed a Senior Associate.
